We Are Hull

Created by Zsolt Balogh with original soundtrack by Dan Jones

We Are Hull is a spectacular panoramic 15-minute film sequence projected onto the Maritime Museum, the Ferens Art Gallery and City Hall. The show takes you on a moving and exhilarating journey through the last hundred years of Hull's history, transporting you into the sky, underwater, and through time. It tells a story of constant change, destruction and recovery, re-invention and resilience, culminating in Hull's win as City of Culture 2017. We Are Hull mixes archive footage with cutting-edge CGI animation and special visual effects, to a soundtrack through time including some of Hull's famous musicians and bands, as well as montage of photos submitted by local people

Dead Bod

Created by Chris Hees animated by Mew Lab Animation

Using the captivating style of the original Dead Bod graffiti, this animation shows the story of the most famous 'bod' in Hull as 2017 sees it come back to life through art. A real-life story that has become part of the city's folklore, it serves as a metaphor for Hull's own narrative - a city whose people have an unshakeable spirit and resilience, who despite being dismissed, unacknowledged and almost destroyed through years of recession, will always resurrect and fly to new heights.

The Deep

Arrivals and Departures

Created by imitating the dog and designed and storyboarded by Simon Wainwright with the Soundtrack created by Terry Dunn

"This place is built on working hands washed here by the sea..."

Arrivals and Departures explores the journeys of people into and through Hull, who moulded the city's population and shaped its distinctive physical and cultural landscape. From the 18th and 19th century workforce of Irish navvies who built the city's docks, the south coast seamen who developed our fishing industry, and the millions of trans-migrants from Scandinavia and Europe who sailed to Hull and on to the New World. From the post-WW2 Chinese and Polish communities, to the 21st-Century European Union, Kosovan and Kurdish incomers, Hull's character, creativity and innovations have been built on the mosaic of people from many shores.

While these layers of history are depicted through archive photography, the broader story of what migration and movement mean in our contemporary society are told through a more playful language of animation. With the Deep as a canvas, the building is transported into the future as the architecture ripples and shifts to depict a ship, a train, a barge and a plane. At the same time layers of maps and plans change into migratory animals reminding us that our travels in ever more sophisticated forms of transport are only a mirror of the natural world.

Hull as a port city is connected through trade, travel and time to people from many other places and cultures. A city whose story past and present is built on a history of integration and culture. A city built on working hands.

(in) Dignity of Labour

Created by artistic directors Jennifer Irons and Zach Walker makeAMPLIFY, with original score by Dan Gale and featuring Jody McKenna

(in) Dignity of Labour examines the worlds of employment, unemployment and the benefits system through the real-life experiences of Hull's young people. Based on interviews and combining movement, archive footage, and video mapping, their stories of struggle, dehumanisation and hope have been set against the boom and bust of Hull's industrial past. This multi-sensory installation connects the past and present, the city to its people and each other. It animates the lost and forgotten spaces of the city, offers an intimate portrait of the ambitions of its young people, and ultimately gives a voice to those who are voiceless.

The Underpass

Embers

Created by Jesse Kanda

A multi-screen and sound installation that recreates an echo of the club scene in 90s Yorkshire. With visuals drawn from archive footage of raves, it portrays the human impulse for freedom of movement, self-expression, and the collective release of shared emotions. 'Beyond the restraints of social norms and conventions we can be who we want to be – be our truer selves, be more human together, experience and find ourselves.'

While the 90s evokes nostalgia for an era when Yorkshire clubs were inclusive places of playful identity, it is their historic setting that has inspired this installation. In the sound for this piece, the artist and composer are influenced by the hits of club and rave culture, all mid to high frequencies are cut out, so we feel the pulse of the music like a distant memory. A tribute to the innocence and importance of self-expression in the protective womb of the club space.

Hullywood Icons

Created by Quentin Budworth

For Hullywood Icons, local people have taken up the challenge of re-creating and starring in a scene from a classic movie. From Brief Encounter to Castaway these still photographs capture the spirit of the original and reveal the character, enthusiasm and passions of those taking part. Projected onto buildings Hullywood Icons puts the people of Hull and East Yorkshire on the big screen with some playful twists.

By using Hull as a movie set, a playground for creative work and as an exhibiting space Quentin has created a body of work that has involved the people of Hull as participants and collaborators in a playful way whilst creating a series of photographs that celebrate the city's unique character and spirit.
