INTRODUCTION

Poetry is enjoying a renaissance. From moments of national significance, to adverts for financial products, poetry is being chosen to persuade and charm or express outrage, defiance and solidarity. It is being rediscovered as a versatile, dynamic and powerful art form which connects with everybody.

One of the oldest art forms, poetry is being enjoyed and created by young and old, on paper, in venues and on the streets, on phones and ipads as well as in books and magazines. Our new festival reflects this diversity by providing something for everyone.

Contains Strong Language looks to the future by presenting leading local, national and international poets and world class spoken word artists alongside brand new voices. As well as writers who are joining the festival for single events, 17 poets will be resident in the city for all four days. The Hull '17 are an ensemble of exciting and innovative poets, commissioned to create new work which will be premiered in the city during the festival.

We also give a nod to the past. Celebrating Hull's status as a city which has inspired poets as diverse as Philip  Larkin, Andrew Marvell, Stevie Smith and Douglas Dunn, CSL justifies Peter Porter's observation that Hull is "the most poetic city in England."

Contains Strong Language is the BBC's new national poetry and spoken word festival. It is a partnership between the BBC, Wrecking Ball Press, Humber Mouth, Hull City of Culture, The British Council, The Arts Council and a number of other poetry organisations. Over the four days, beginning on National Poetry Day, Thursday 28 September, Radio 1 Xtra, Radio 2, Radio 3, Radio 4, 5 Live and 6 Music as well as Radio Humberside will be broadcasting live from festival venues in Hull along with BBC TV.

There will be performances, workshops, picnics, films, concerts and readings. Poets will be everywhere, including places you wouldn't expect.....

Hull will be alive with the buzz and rhythm of poetry. It will challenge, stimulate and entertain. Most of all, it will be accessible, relevant and engaging.

Festival Directors
Susan Roberts and Shane Rhodes

SUN 1 OCT JUBILEE CHURCH 20:30 - 23:30

62 King Edward St, Hull HU1 3SQ Tickets: £25

Performing the Songs and Poems of Molly Drake

A wistful mother makes some simple home recordings in her family sitting room during the 1950s. Little could she have known that more than sixty years later, the dust would be blown off her song collection, firstly in 2013 with the release of her own recordings, and now by The Unthanks, who believe her work is extraordinary enough to rank alongside and independently of her brilliant son, Nick Drake. The tour will be an audio visual work featuring live performance by The Unthanks, film footage of Molly Drake, a set depicting her living room in abstract fashion, and spoken word pre-recorded by Molly's daughter, actress Gabrielle Drake. In some cases, The Unthanks in characteristically adventurous style, have drifted considerably from the ornamentations and voicings of the original songs, and at other points have yielded more faithfully. At the core in both cases lie the emotive sentiments of a unique and unheralded woman.

"The Unthanks are capable of such beauty that sometimes I can hardly bear to listen to them. And sometimes, when I know I need it, I'll listen to them to open me up and clean me out." Martin Freeman
